Humanities Institute’s Spotlights of the Week:
"How to Teach About Islam in the Age of Islamophobia"
Edward E. Curtis, IV (IUPUI)
October 17, 4:00 p.m. – 6:00 p.m.
North Dining Room, Ohio State University Faculty Club (2nd floor)

Bio: Edward Curtis is Millennium Chair of the Liberal Arts and Professor of Religious Studies at the Indiana University School of Liberal Arts in Indianapolis. He is the author or editor of eleven books on Islam and Muslims in the United States and the African Diaspora, including, most recently, Muslim American Politics and the Future of U.S. Democracy.

Abstract: Offering personal narrative and pedagogical analysis, Edward Curtis examines how teaching on Islam and Muslims changed for him and other Islamic studies scholars after 9/11. Arguing that a lot of post-9/11 teaching falls along either liberal or radical political lines, Curtis also shows how community-engaged research, K-14 teacher training, and public intellectual work have become essential in the struggle against anti-Muslim prejudice, discrimination, and violence. This lecture will be held on Thursday, October 17 in the North Dining Room of the Ohio State University Faculty Club (2nd floor). More information on this event can be found at https://religion.osu.edu/events/symposium-religion-public-engagement. Center for Medieval and Renaissance Studies Colloquium: "The Invisible in Early Modern Nahua Art" with Alanna Radlo-Dzur (History of Art)
October 21, 4:00 p.m. - 5:15 p.m.
198 Hagerty Hall

Abstract: This presentation examines the structure of imagery depicting invisible essences in early modern central Mexican art. Spanning the postclassic to early colonial periods from the fourteenth to seventeenth centuries, the project focuses on the representation of breath, the sensorium, and the divine in Nahua image production. How did postclassic Nahua artists represent the intangible in visual media? How did the iconography of invisible concepts relate to spoken language? When did Nahua artists incorporate new European ideas into their image production? This project focuses on the postclassic Borgia Group manuscripts and associated mural paintings such as those found at Tizatlán, and Ocotelolco as well as early colonial manuscripts such as the Florentine Codex and mural cycles like those at Malinalco, Ixmiquilpan, and Casa del Dean. This historical research is complemented by ethnographic sources and my own oral history research in the Huastecan Nahuatl-speaking region of Chicontepec, Veracruz.

The presentation will be held in Hagerty Hall, room 198. For more information, please visit https://cmrs.osu.edu/events/cmrs-colloquium-alanna-radlo-dzur-history-art-invisible-early-modern-nahua-art
