Humanities Institute's Spotlights of the Week

Center for Folklore Studies: "Workshop: Building Out Black Narratives During a Pandemic" with William Isom II

September 8, 4:00 p.m. - 6:00 p.m. via ZOOM
CFS is excited to be partnering with the The Appalachian Studies Network and the Department of African American and African Studies to host documentary filmmaker William Isom II with support from the Global Arts and Humanities Discovery Theme Mobile Methods and Practices Grant. Mr. Isom is the Director of the Black in Appalachia Project which works to "raise the visibility and contributions of the Black communities of the Mountain South through research, local narratives, public engagement and exhibition."

Mr. Isom will hold a workshop titled Building Out Black Narratives During a Pandemic for students interested in documenting historically marginalized communities and the use of social media in public scholarship. To RSVP or for more information, please contact CFS public folklorist Dr. Jasper Waugh-Quasebarth (waugh-quasebarth.1@osu.edu).

This event is FREE and open to the public and will be captioned.

If you haven't already signed up for the K'acha Willaykuna listserv, please do so at https://globalartsandhumanities.osu.edu/cross-disciplinary-research-focus-areas/immobility/kacha-willaykuna. We have an exciting line up of virtual events and programming for this autumn including:

- A series of virtual workshops on Epistemic Justice, Identidad y Pacha, and Storytelling as Social Change presented by Pachaysana Institute (see details below and attached)

- A collaboration with Cassandra Press focused on a commissioned reader edited by artists Kandis Williams and Brazilian artist Aline Baiana that bridges questions of racial justice in the US & Indigenous resistance in the Amazon. Artistic research by these two artists with broad networks (Indigenous resistance, film, indigenous women, racial justice in US) will generate an enduring resource for our courses. The final product will be a Zine-style anthology of texts. Reflections on the artistic process and dialogue between the two artists as creative practice will take place during select sessions of K'acha Willaykuna’s “Our Unlearning Hour” weekly forum.

- A collaboration with Red de Artistas Interculturales Communitarios del Ecuador (webpage forthcoming) which involves 200 Andean and Amazonian indigenous artists as they find creative solutions for sustaining their artistic traditions during the COVID-19 pandemic.

These events and programming are co-sponsored by Center for Latin American Studies, K'acha Willaykuna: Andean & Amazonia Indigenous Arts & Humanities Collaboration funded through the Global Arts and Humanities Discovery Theme, Whitten Private Donation, and the Department of Spanish and Portuguese.

Our Working Groups are underway as well. If you are interested in participating, please see the K’acha Willaykuna webpage and reach out to the appropriate WG coordinators.
